Terrance M. O'Reilly, Director Administrative Appeals Office

DISCUSSION: The waiver application was denied by the District Director, San Francisco, California, and a subsequent appeal was dismissed by the Associate Commissioner for Examinations. The matter is before the Associate Commissioner on a motion to reopen. The motion will be dismissed. The order dismissing the appeal will be affirmed.

The applicant is a native and citizen of China who was found to be inadmissible to the United States under § 212(a)(6)(C)(i) of the Immigration and Nationality Act, (the Act), 8 U.S.C. 1182(a)(6)(C)(i), for having procured admission into the United States by fraud or willful misrepresentation in 1996. The applicant married a naturalized U.S. citizen in November 1996 and is the beneficiary of an approved petition for alien relative. The applicant seeks the above waiver in order to remain in the United States and reside with her spouse.

The district director concluded that the applicant had failed to establish that extreme hardship would be imposed on a qualifying relative and denied the application accordingly. The Associate Commissioner affirmed that decision on appeal.

On motion, counsel raises a more salient issue which must be thoroughly examined. Counsel argued on page one of his November 12, 1997 appeal that; "Applicant was not inspected at the airport because her passport was presented by the smuggler to the immigration officer at the airport." Counsel now states on page three of his motion that; "When entering the U.S., the applicant was given a travel document by the smuggler which she used to enter the U.S." Counsel asserts that the applicant entered the United States with the assistance of a smuggler. The applicant paid a substantial amount of money to a person who represented that arrangements had been made for her to enter the United States. The applicant was never told by the smuggler whether the passport was real or fake and it is possible for people in China to obtain real passports for aliens to travel abroad. The travel document was subsequently confiscated by the smuggler. Counsel raises the issue that it is possible that the passport was real. Counsel declares that there is no evidence that the applicant has committed fraud; therefore, a waiver application is not required.

In Matter of Y-G-, 20 I&N Dec. 794 (BIA 1994), the Board stated that a finding of fraud will be closely scrutinized since such a finding may perpetually bar an alien from admission.

The record contains the following cryptic notes on a processing sheet; to wit: "Used false pp to enter. Gave pp to smuggler at the LA airport. Paid $20,000 Hong Kong dollars for being smuggled, not including airfare." These notes support the changes made on the Form I-485 application in Part 3, Number 10, that she used a false passport to enter the United States and in Part 3, A, she entered with a false passport. These changes were based on sworn testimony during her interview and were acknowledged by the applicant's signature on October 1, 1997.

Further, if the applicant had been admitted to the United States in some capacity in her true name, Service indices would contain a record of that Form I-94 in her true name. There is no Service record of her admission under the name of

Section 212(a) CLASSES OF ALIENS INELIGIBLE FOR VISAS OR ADMISSION.-Except as otherwise provided in this Act, aliens who are inadmissible under the following paragraphs are ineligible to receive visas and ineligible to be admitted to the United States:

- (6) ILLEGAL ENTRANTS AND IMMIGRATION VIOLATORS. -
- (C) MISREPRESENTATION .-
- (i) IN GENERAL.-Any alien who, by fraud or willfully misrepresenting a material fact, seeks to procure (or has sought to procure or has procured) a visa, other documentation, or admission into the United States or other benefit provided under this Act is inadmissible.

Section 212(i) ADMISSION OF IMMIGRANT INADMISSIBLE FOR FRAUD OR WILLFUL MISREPRESENTATION OF MATERIAL FACT.-

- (1) The Attorney General may, in the discretion of the Attorney General, waive the application of clause (i) of subsection (a) (6) (C) in the case of an alien who is the spouse, son or daughter of a United States citizen or of an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence, if it is established to the satisfaction of the Attorney General that the refusal of admission to the United States of such immigrant alien would result in extreme hardship to the citizen or lawfully resident spouse or parent of such an alien.
- (2) No court shall have jurisdiction to review a decision or action of the Attorney General regarding a waiver under paragraph (1).

Sections 212(a)(6)(C) and 212(i) of the Act were amended by the Illegal Immigration Reform and Immigrant Responsibility Act of 1996 (IIRIRA), Pub L. 104-208, 110 Stat. 3009. There is no longer any alternative provision for waiver of a § 212(a)(6)(C)(i) violation due to passage of time. In the absence of explicit statutory direction, an applicant's eligibility is determined under the statute in effect at the time his or her application is finally considered. See Matter of Soriano, Interim Decision 3289 (BIA, A.G. 1996).

If an amendment makes the statute more restrictive after the application is filed, the eligibility is determined under the terms of the amendment. Conversely, if the amendment makes the statute more generous, the application must be considered by more generous terms. Matter of George and Lopez-Alvarez, 11 I&N Dec. 419 (BIA 1965); Matter of Levegue, 12 I&N Dec. 633 (BIA 1968).

1986, Congress expanded the reach of the ground inadmissibility in the Immigration Marriage Fraud Amendments of 1986, P.L. No. 99-639, and redesignated as § 212(a)(6)(C) of the Act by the Immigration Act of 1990 (Pub. L. No. 101-649, Nov. 29, 1990, 104 Stat. 5067) effective June 1, 1991. Congress imposed the statutory bar on (a) those who made oral misrepresentations in seeking admission into the United States; (b) those who have made material misrepresentations in seeking entry admission into the United States or "other benefits" provided under the Act; and (c) it made the amended statute applicable to the receipt of visas by, and the admission of, aliens occurring after the date of the enactment based on fraud or misrepresentation occurring before, on, or after such date.

In 1990, § 274C of the Act, 8 U.S.C. 1324c, was inserted by the Immigration Act of 1990 (P.L. 101-649, Nov. 29, 1990, 104 Stat. 5059), effective for persons or entities that have committed violations on or after November 29, 1990. Section 274C(a) provided penalties for document fraud stating that it is unlawful for any person or entity knowingly-

(2) to use, attempt to use, possess, obtain, accept, or receive or to provide any forged, counterfeit, altered, or falsely made document in order to satisfy any requirement of this Act,...(or to obtain a benefit under this Act). The latter portion was added in 1996 by the Illegal Immigration Reform and Immigrant Responsibility Act (IIRIRA).

In 1994 Congress passed the Violent Crime Control and Law Enforcement Act (P.L. 103-322, September 13, 1994), which enhanced the criminal penalties of certain offenses, including 18 U.S.C. 1546:

- (a)...Impersonation in entry document or admission application; evading or trying to evade immigration laws using assumed or fictitious name...knowingly making false statement under oath about material fact in immigration application or document....
- (b) Knowingly using false or unlawfully issued document or false attestation to satisfy the Act provision on verifying whether employee is authorized to work.

The penalty for a violation under (a) increased from up to 5 years imprisonment and a fine or both to up to 10 years imprisonment and a fine or both. The penalty for a violation under (b) increased from up to 2 years imprisonment or a fine or both to up to 5 years imprisonment or a fine, or both.

To recapitulate, the applicant purchased a fraudulent passport and used that document to procure admission into the United States in April 1996.

After reviewing the amendments to the Act and to other statutes regarding fraud and misrepresentation from 1957 to the present time, and after noting the increased penalties Congress has placed on such activities, including the narrowing of the parameters for eligibility, the re-inclusion of the perpetual bar and eliminating children as a consideration in determining the presence of extreme hardship, it is concluded that Congress has placed a high priority on reducing and/or stopping fraud and misrepresentation related to immigration and other matters.

Section 212(i) of the Act provides that a waiver of the bar to admission resulting from § 212(a)(6)(C) of the Act is dependent first upon a showing that the bar imposes an extreme hardship on a qualifying family member. Although extreme hardship is a requirement for § 212(i) relief, once established, it is but one favorable discretionary factor to be considered. See Matter of Mendez, Interim Decision 3272 (BIA 1996).

In Matter of Cervantes-Gonzalez, Interim Decision 3380 (BIA 1999), the Board of Immigration Appeals (BIA) stipulated that the factors deemed relevant in determining whether an alien has established extreme hardship pursuant to § 212(i) of the Act include, but are not limited to, the following: the presence of a lawful permanent resident or United States citizen spouse or parent in this country; the qualifying relative's family ties outside the United States; the conditions in the country or countries to which the qualifying relative would relocate and the extent of the qualifying relative's ties in such countries; the financial impact of departure from this finally, significant conditions of particularly when tied to an unavailability of suitable medical care in the country to which the qualifying relative would relocate.

In Matter of Cervantes-Gonzalez, the Board also held that the underlying fraud or misrepresentation may be considered as an adverse factor in adjudicating a § 212(i) waiver application in the exercise of discretion. Matter of Tijam, Interim Decision 3372 (BIA 1998), followed. The Board declined to follow the policy set forth by the Commissioner in Matter of Alonso, 17 I&N Dec. 292 (Comm. 1979); Matter of Da Silva, 17 I&N Dec. 288 (Comm. 1979), and noted that the United States Supreme Court ruled in INS v. Yueh-Shaio Yanq, 519 U.S. 26 (1996), that the Attorney General has the authority to consider any and all negative factors, including the respondent's initial fraud.

In Perez v. INS, 96 F.3d 390 (9th Cir. 1996), the court stated that "extreme hardship" is hardship that is unusual or beyond that which would normally be expected upon deportation. The common results of deportation are insufficient to prove extreme hardship.

The court held in INS v. Jong Ha Wanq, 450 U.S. 139 (1981), that the mere showing of economic detriment to qualifying family members is insufficient to warrant a finding of extreme hardship.

Counsel asserts that the applicant's spouse (hereafter referred to as and her 17 year old daughter will suffer extreme hardship is the applicant is removed. Hardship to a child is not a consideration in the present matter. Counsel refers to a 1994 medical operation that received on the right side of his head in an attempt to cure a problem of nerve paralysis. Counsel states that has not recovered from that operation. Due to his physical disability, chronic migraine headaches, has not been able to obtain gainful employment or business contracts and one of his two companies has been closed.

In support, counsel submits the 1994 medical records relating to illness and a statement indicating that the applicant is his sole financial support. The applicant has not provided a new or current medical report relating to his illness. The March 1994 medical report is only a part of medical history.

The assertion of financial hardship to advanced in the record is contradicted by the fact that submitted an Affidavit of Support (Form I-134) in which he indicated that he would support the applicant. Even though this document was submitted prior to December 19, 1997 (the date on and after which the legally enforceable Form I-864 (Affidavit of Support) is required, the statute and the regulations do not provide for an alien beneficiary to execute an affidavit of support in behalf of a U.S. citizen or resident alien petitioner. Therefore, a claim that an alien beneficiary is needed for the purpose of supporting a citizen or resident alien petitioner can only be considered as a hardship in rare instances.

There are no laws that require a United States citizen to leave the United States and live abroad. Further, the common results of deportation are insufficient to prove extreme hardship. See Hassan V. INS, 927 F.2d 465 (9th Cir. 1991). The uprooting of family and separation from friends does not necessarily amount to extreme hardship but rather represents the type of inconvenience and hardship experienced by the families of most aliens being deported. See Shooshtary v. INS, 39 F.3d 1049 (9th Cir. 1994). In Silverman V. Rogers, 437 F.2d 102 (1st Cir. 1970), the court stated that, "even assuming that the Federal Government had no right either to prevent a marriage or destroy it, we believe that here it has done nothing more than to say that the residence of one of the marriage partners may not be in the United States."

A review of the documentation in the record, when considered in its totality, reflects that the applicant has failed to show that the qualifying relative would suffer extreme hardship over and above the normal economic and social disruptions involved in the removal of a family member. Accordingly, the applicant has failed to establish extreme hardship to a qualifying relative.

The grant or denial of the above waiver does not turn only on the issue of the meaning of "extreme hardship." It also hinges on the discretion of the Attorney General and pursuant to such terms, conditions, and procedures as she may by regulations prescribe.

It is noted that the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals in Carnalla-Muñoz v. INS, 627 F.2d 1004 (9th Cir. 1980), held that an after-acquired equity (referred to as an after-acquired family tie in Matter of Tijam, Interim Decision 3372 (BIA 1998), need not be accorded great weight by the district director in considering discretionary weight. The applicant in the present matter entered the United States in 1996 by fraud and married her spouse in November 1996 one month following his divorce from his first wife. The applicant now seeks relief based on that after-acquired equity.

The favorable factors include the applicant's family tie, the absence of a criminal record, and general hardship to a qualifying relative.

The unfavorable factors include the applicant's procuring admission into the United States by fraud, the applicant's employment without Service authorization, and her stay in the United States without Service authorization.

The United States Supreme Court ruled in INS v. Yueh-Shaio Yang, that the Attorney General has the authority to consider any and all negative factors in deciding whether or not to grant a favorable exercise of discretion. The Associate Commissioner does not deem it improper to give less weight in a discretionary matter to an alien's marriage which was entered into in the United States following a fraudulent entry and after a period of unlawful residence in the United States as opposed to a marriage entered into abroad followed by a fraudulent entry.

In the latter scenario the alien who marries abroad legitimately gains an equity or family tie which may result in his or her obtaining an immigrant visa and entering the United States lawfully even though the alien may fraudulently enter the United States after the marriage and before obtaining the visa. Whereas in the former scenario the alien who marries after he or she fraudulently enters the United States and resides without Service authorization does gain an after-acquired equity or family tie that he or she was not entitled to without the perpetration of the fraud.

Notwithstanding that the decision in Carnalla-Muñoz v. INS, related to an alien in removal or deportation proceedings, the alien's equity was gained subsequent to a violation of an immigration law, and when considering an issue as a matter of discretion an equity gained contrary to law should receive less weight than an equity gained through legal and legitimate means.

The applicant's actions in this matter cannot be condoned. The unfavorable factors in this matter outweigh the favorable ones. In proceedings for application for waiver of grounds of inadmissibility under § 212(i) of the Act, the burden of proving eligibility remains entirely with the applicant. See Matter of T-S- \underline{Y} -, 7 I&N Dec. 582 (BIA 1957). Here, the applicant has not met that burden. Accordingly, the order dismissing the appeal will be affirmed.

ORDER: The motion is dismissed. The order of December 10, 1999 dismissing the appeal is affirmed.
